Nov 2022

From the President's Pen

Hello Fellow Creatives!

The November program on Saturday, Nov 12th, 1-3pm, is an Oil painting workshop/demo by member Helen Meyers. More details about the program are on page 3. Please note we'll be meeting downstairs for this program.

The current show ODE TO OXFORD reception is Sunday, 11/13, 2-4pm. Award for Mayor's choice will be given by Mayor Gerald Norton. Please bring something for the refreshment table.

It's getting to that time of year and here's the first note regarding the December Holiday Pot Luck Luncheon, which will be Dec 10, 1-4pm in the Municipal Building. Susan Hammond will be the contact person this year. More info will be in the December newsletter regarding signups etc.

And lastly, I feel I should go over a few points regarding how we do things. 1.

Black frames & white mats are NOT required for photographs. 2. Entry forms for shows MUST be submitted by the due date. Walk-in entries on artwork drop off days will not be accepted. 3. No nudes in artwork exhibited in the Municipal building. 4. Artwork exhibited does NOT have to be for sale. 5. All artwork entered into shows, unless otherwise noted, must be by living artists. 6. Also unless otherwise noted—artwork exhibited should be "new", i.e., created within the past 3yrs & not exhibited previously in a WCARTS show. 7. Professional presentation of the artwork is required or artwork will be turned away. This means no flimsy, broken frames. No dirty, smudgy, scratched glass/acrylic. Proper, well attached, hanging hardware. 8. Drop off and Pickup artwork on time or arrange for someone to come in your place, with the artist entry form paperwork, to sign for you. 9. Be respectful of program presenters. Put your cell phone rings on silent & no sidebar conversations. There's plenty of time to socialize after the program over refreshments.

Keep Arting!

It was a smaller group for Barbara Stoffels' "Understanding Picasso" lecture, but that enabled us to have some vigorous discussions when we broke up into groups!

Artist Glimpse by Jean M. Perry: "The Romantic Movement & 2 NJ Artists"

Did you know that the first settlers in America could not concern themselves with "art". They were too busy building their new country, bringing their traditions with them as well as creating truly American traditions. Earliest artists were limners or sign painters, who also dabbled in portraits. And so, the education of artists was obtained by returning to Europe, mostly England, where they were welcomed by Benjamin West and later, off to Rome, France and Germany. Europeans chuckled at Americans, believing there was not much to paint in the new country, no wonderful ancient ruins or beautiful sculptures or churches erected during the Middle Ages.

Around the early 19th C, Americans decided they were going to go out and "find America"! Writers such as Washington Irving, Willian Cullen Bryant and James Fennimore Cooper provided inspiration. The "American Romantic Movement" began. Americans fell in love with their country! The group of artists best acclaimed for this movement became known as "The Hudson River School". Theirs was a concept and a style (not a building). With the belief that our beautiful country was spiritually connected to nature and God, they became our first major "plein air" artists, following the concepts of the Barbizon school in France, which painted in the outdoors. The dramatic atmospheres of wilderness, mountains, rivers, oceans and pastoral scenes offered new interpretations and allegorical themes. They found the natural environment to be a source of divine expression. Their work spoke to the people!

Thomas Cole is considered to be the Founder of the Hudson River School of artists, exploring our distinct landscape. Born in England in 1801, Cole became famous for "The Oxbow" and his "Voyage of Life" and "The Course of Empire" series displaying the American landscape as a part of the human cause. Among his followers was Asher Durand (1796-1886), who was born and died in Maplewood, NJ. Durand was originally a printmaker. Known for his tonalist paintings, as most of them were, he strove to obtain the effects of sunlight on a scene. His famous painting, "Kindred Spirits", was composed during a trip to the Adirondacks. He depicts friends, Cole and poet, William Cullen Bryant, on a hill at Kauterskill Clove in New York State.

George Inness was born in 1825 in Newburgh, NY, one of 13 children. His family moved to Newark, N.J., where his father put him in charge of a grocery store he owned in order to dissuade George from becoming an artist. He travelled to Italy and the west, eventually moving to Montclair, N.J in 1885, where he set up a studio, attracted other artists and created a cultural community! Known for his Swedenborgian beliefs in that God speaks to humans in harmony with nature, Inness sought to find his inner self through his art, luminist in tone. He painted many pastoral scenes of New Jersey as well other places he visited. It was said that just before he died in 1894, Inness was viewing a sunset in Scotland, throwing up his arms, proclaiming, "My God! Oh how beautiful!".

Thomas Cole died of pneumonia or pleurisy in 1848. The art world was stunned at the loss of their trail blazing artist of the American wilderness. His many friends and followers include: Cropsey, Gifford, Kensett, Church, Heade, Johnson, Bierstadt, Morse and others.

Twenty 20 years ago, my husband and I took a weekend to explore The Hudson River School Trail. This trail was mapped out by "Cedar Grove, The Thomas Cole National Historic Site" In New York State. You can also view a collection of George Inness's work at the Montclair Art Museum in Montclair, N.J. Enjoy!
